MANAGER COMMENT

Most stock markets, including that of South Africa, retreated from recent highs and finished June on a mediocre note with modest gains or month-on-month declines. The market showed fears over the highly contagious delta variant and global inflation concerns following the announcement from the US Federal Reserve Bank regarding future interest hikes, while investors also took profits at the end of the quarter. Vaccination rollouts continued to accelerate in most developed countries, especially in Europe, while emerging markets continued to lag. Allowing governments in developed markets to continue the easing of COVID-related mobility restrictions in turn increased economic activity levels in these countries.

Global equity markets continued to march higher in June and recorded gains for a fifth consecutive month. The MSCI World Index returned 1.40% month-on-month (m/m) in USD and 5.52% in ZAR. US equity markets outperformed European equity markets with both obtaining positive returns for the month. The S&P 500 (US$) was up 2.33%, the FTSE (£) up 0.16% and the Euro Stoxx 50(£) up 0.70%.

Equity markets have been benefiting from post pandemic economic normalisation in the form of cyclical, value stocks over the past few months. However, June instead saw the return of its 'pandemic beneficiaries', predominately technology businesses. A key catalyst for this rotation back into structural growth companies was the Fed's announcement mentioned above.

In June, emerging markets were also held back by rotation into growth companies, with the MSCI Emerging Market Index returning -0.11% month-on-month in USD and 3.95% in ZAR. The outliers for the month included Brazil and Russia, which benefited from their high exposure to energy companies, which rallied along with the strong oil price. On the back of this and lagged vaccination campaigns in emerging markets, it was no surprise to see developed market equities outperform emerging market equities.

The South African equity market winning streak came to an end this month, as the FTSE/JSE All Share Index closed at -2.43%, despite this it remains double digits up year to date.

Industrials managed to finish the month 0.56% up, with resources and financials delivering a poor return of -6.55% and -2.62%. SA listed property closed the month 3.37% up, with cash (STEFL) once again returning a modest 0.31%.

In terms of our currency, the weaker dollar, lower US interest rates and SA's strong terms of trade were all supportive of a stronger rand in the first half of June, but was thrown off by the Fed's announcement, resulting in the currency trading with a bearish tone and closing the month 3.91% lower against the USD. Furthermore, the ZAR was down 0.94% and 1.13% against the euro and sterling respectively. The only win came in the form of 1.46% month-on-month to the Japanese yen.
