MANAGER COMMENT

After a remarkable rebound in July, most major global markets closed August weaker on the back of concerns that more aggressive interest rate hikes from central banks to control inflation will result in a global economic downturn.

At the start of August, global markets were quite positive on the back of an optimistic investor outlook. Unfortunately, sentiment turned negative towards the end of August, with markets drawing back sharply to end the month lower. The MSCI World was down 4.33% in USD and down 2.12% in ZAR for the month. European and UK markets bore the impact of the sell-off as their economies seem most vulnerable to the squeeze from higher energy prices. The Euro Stoxx 50 fell 5.1% in August, while the DAX was down 4.81%.

Emerging markets (EMs) held up relatively well in August in rand terms, posting gains of 2.35% in rand terms but ending flat in USD. The Brazilian stock market was the standout EM performer in August, closing the month up in excess of 6.2%, as it benefitted from its significant exposure to energy shares.

South African markets echoed their global counterparts, advancing on the back of strong investor sentiment to rally 5% into mid-August, before being sharply impacted by the hawkish fed statements. The FTSE/JSE All Share was down 1.84% for the month, mainly driven by resources, which was down 4.13%. Financials and Industrials were also down for the month, coming in at -2.34% and -0.60% respectively. The listed property sector was down 5.41% for the month. South African 10-year government bond yields ended the month marginally higher (10.9%), having come into the month already elevated (10.8%). The All Bond Index delivered a flat 0.31% for the month while cash did marginally better, returning 0.45%. The local currency struggled against a strong US dollar, ending the month 2.3% weaker and featuring amongst the worst-performing currencies in August.
