MANAGER COMMENT

The COVID-19 pandemic, and global governments' reaction to stave off the spread through stringent restrictions, resulted in over 90% of the world economy going through some form of lockdown during March and April of this year. The majority of countries, however, began easing lockdown restrictions within two months, facing the conundrum of saving lives versus supporting livelihoods.

As the world slowly starts to shake off the shackles of lockdown restrictions, glimmers of positive data releases start to surprise. But the rebound remains sensitive to concerns around second-wave infections that constrain the full reopening of economies.

The gradual easing of lockdown restrictions globally, announcements of further monetary and fiscal stimulus measures, and investor optimism that the global recession had bottomed in April all underpinned demand for both developed and domestic market equities in recent months. July was no exception. What is clear is that the pandemic has created winners and losers. Industries and companies that support the stay-at-home lifestyle that has been forced upon the world population have done phenomenally well; those that rely on people leaving their homes or going out have suffered immensely.

In July the MSCI World Index returned 2.7% (in rand terms) and 20.2% year-to-date (YTD). Global central banks continued to do what they could to keep interest rates extraordinarily low, an approach which seems unlikely to change any time soon. This stance, along with the prospects of intensified geopolitical risks and growing debt burdens, saw investors flocking to gold, which had its best month since 2011 as it hit an all-time high of $1 995 per ounce during the month, leaving it up 30% YTD.

Despite economic news not been favourable on the local front, local equities had a positive month. The FTSE/JSE All Share Index returned 2.6% for July, managing to scrape back most of its YTD losses. It is no surprise that Resources led the sectors with an 8.3% return for the month, coming in at 15.1% on a YTD basis. Industrials delivered -1.2% for July and was up 8.4% YTD. Financials returned 0.4% for the month, still down 32.6% on a YTD basis. Bonds were marginally positive for the month despite the significant sell-off during March and accompanying foreign outflows. The ALBI gaining 0.6% for July and 0.97% YTD. Cash (STeFI) returned 0.42% in July and 3.6% YTD. The listed property sector (SAPY) lost another 3.2% during the month and was down 39.6% YTD. Stronger commodity prices and the weaker dollar boded well for the South African rand during July, with the ZAR gaining as much as 4% against the USD, before closing the month around 2% stronger. It lost 3.9% and 3.1% against the sterling and euro respectively for July.
