The investor is liable for CGT on any transactions in the units of the underlying unit trust within the wrap funds. Compulsory investments are not subject to CGT. Performance is calculated using net returns (after fees) of the underlying unit trusts, and quoted excluding wrap fund fees. Performance quoted is pre-tax. Fund performance numbers shown are for a notional portfolio and do not reflect the actual performance of the client invested in the wrap fund due to timing differences of investments or disinvestments of the client. Benchmark returns for CPI are based on actual published returns and an estimated one month return for the month of the report date. ASISA Benchmark returns are the ASISA returns available as at the time of reporting.

MANAGER COMMENT

In the last month of the second quarter of 2020, it became apparent that most economies have not met the conditions for a speedy recovery. A second round of infections, without a vaccine, remains a material risk to the global outlook. Risky assets held up well in June, although it was not a smooth ride. But just as equity markets start to recover, uncertainty looms around escalating tensions between the US and China. Over the short term, geopolitical, trade, and US election risks increasingly weigh on the global economic outlook. Subsequent waves of COVID-19 outbreaks and a failure to develop effective treatments or a vaccine, or a monetary policy mistake or some hesitancy over fiscal support, could derail the global recovery.

Quantitative easing by emerging market central banks have helped stabilise financial markets. Despite small quantities, the result has been lowered government borrowing costs and this has slowed the further weakening of already weak currencies. While Minister Mboweni painted a grim picture of the country's finances in his special adjustment budget, he said the government would be required to build high quality bridges, roads, railways, ports, and other infrastructure. The country is already borrowing at a rate of more than R1 billion a day, but even that may not be enough to plug a hole in government finances. This is as much as 15% of gross domestic product, which is more than double the 6.8% shortfall that was projected in February.

Investors continue to focus on guidance regarding the shape of the macro and earnings recovery. The MSCI World delivered some 1.16% in rands and the MSCI Emerging Markets index fared far better than its developed market counterparts, delivering some 5.81% in rands in June. Emerging markets and Europe outperformed the US in dollar terms. Developed market bonds delivered -0.57% in rands. Also, developed market property rallied 1.21% in rands. The local equity market tracked other emerging markets during June, and the ALSI rallied 7.74% in rands. After a terrible start to the year, the listed property sector rallied strongly in June delivering 13.41% in rands. In June we saw a further steepening in the yield curve as yields rose with some flattening from the 15-year area of the yield curve. As such, the ALBI declined some 1.18% in rands. Inflation-linked bonds followed suit and delivered marginal negative returns of -0.40% in rands. Local cash delivered some 0.44% in rands for the month of June.
